Modernisation of the DGH16 forging line – Maximum safety and better availability

A short while ago our DGH16 forging line was modernised in cooperation with the firms "HOK Hydraulik und Maschinenservice" and "Bernd Wiesemann Pressenservice". The reasons for the modernisation were firstly because the machinery no longer complied with current safety standards and secondly that replacement parts for the electrical control system for the hammer could no longer be obtained. Due to the old configuration of the machinery collisions might also have occurred between the forging hammer and the manipulator.

At our plant forgings with an operating weight of up to 122 kg are produced on the DGH16 forging line. It consists of a counterblow hammer, a manipulator and a trimming press.

The old control system for the hammer was removed and replaced by a new fail-safe Siemens S7 1515F-2PN SPS control system. The control station was also refurbished and equipped with a TP 1200 touch panel so that the machinery is displayed and the process parameters are entered. Furthermore the forging hammer was completely rewired. The manipulator was integrated into the control centre. So collisions between the hammer and the manipulator can no longer occur. The drive for the trimming press was reconditioned, two new safety valves were fitted and the guiding rails of the plunger were replaced.

Thanks to the well-coordinated team and the excellent cooperation with our partners the forging line was back into production after two weeks as expected. As a result of the modernisation the operability of the machinery was made easier and its availability was increased.

Our employees

Since August 2019 we have had a new trainee in our commercial section, Jan Niklas Jung.

As we already reported in the 01/2019 edition of the newsletter, Jan started his career at WSW in spring 2018 as a lateral entrant in the QS department and during that period got to know the company.

Due to his good performance and pleasant way of getting on with people we were particularly pleased when he chose to join us as a trainee industrial clerk.

His first stop was in the sales and purchasing department.

Our aim is to develop him to be a commercial all-rounder who can support us in the long term in all sectors.

We wish him all the best and every success in his traineeship and will provide him with advice and support.
